Features of Interest

- 1 The present Biddlesden House occupies the site of a Cistercian Abbey. Founded in 1147, the abbey was dissolved in 1539. One of three fisheries which may date back to the monastic period can be seen at Blind Bridge. The nearby Abbey House was constructed in the 17th century of local limestone.
- 2 The ride passes through a narrow hedged field which marks the line of an ancient highway known locally as the Woddeyway. At Woodgreen, it was crossed by a Roman road the line of which can still be traced from Buckingham to High Cross.
- 3 The most prominent structure in Westbury is the mill. The present building was constructed early in the 19th century but there would have been a mill on this site from mediaeval times. Mills were an important asset to the lord of the manor as he could compel his tenants to bring their grain to his mill, whilst charging them a toll for the privilege.
- 4 The river Great Ouse rises just north of Brackley and flows for approximately 120 miles via Bedford and Ely to King's Lynn where it empties into The Wash. During high summer a mass of insects appear at the riverside including dragonflies, mayflies and alderflies.
- 5 The path follows close to the old Buckingham to Brackley Junction railway which was completed in 1850. The line crossing on a viaduct here was the Great Central main line from Sheffield to Marylebone completed in 1898. Neither line survived the Beeching cuts and both closed in 1966.

- 6 During the Second World War, the construction of airfields at Turweston, Silverstone and Finmere had a major impact on the landscape of North Bucks, with large areas of land being laid aside for the construction of runways, control towers and a host of support buildings.
- 7 'Westbury Wilds' or 'The Poores' is a piece of woodland allotted to the parish of Westbury at the time of the 18th century enclosures. In 1764 an Act of Parliament laid down that any profit arising from these woodlands should be distributed among the 'necessitous, industrious and honest poor of the parish of Westbury'.
